Re: DeAssis v. J. Matone, Inc.
Docket No.: ESX-L-5455-06
Our File No.: 61N-8040

Dear Dr.:

Please be advised that this firm represents Amarildo DeAssis in regards to the injuries suffered that form the basis of the treatment requested by you.

As such, you have requested that we agree to satisfy and pay the money due and owing to you for treatment and services requested by our client in the amount of $9,950.00 before you perform any further treatment or participate further in the litigation herein. On January 17, 2007, we requested that you satisfy these obligations of any future settlement or judgment from this matter which our client agreed and consented to. However, you have refused to put a lien on the file, and have required this payment up front as a condition for your further involvement in this matter. However, such condition is unlawful as a physician is under a legal duty to cooperate with his patient in litigation.

The nature of the relationship between a patient and physician imposes fiduciary obligations on the physician. This fiduciary duty includes the duty of treating doctors to cooperate in litigation to their patients. Members of the medical profession “owe their patients more than just medical care for which payment is exacted; there is a duty of total care; that includes and comprehends a duty to aid the patient in litigation, to render reports when necessary and to attend court when needed. That further includes a duty to refuse affirmative assistance to the patient’s antagonist in litigation.” Piller by Piller v. Kovarsky, 194 N.J. Super. 392, 296 (Law. Div. 1984) (citing Alexander v. Knight, 197 Pa. Super. 79 (Super. Ct. 1962)).

The New Jersey Courts have recognized, on contract principles, the enforceability of a treating physician's affirmative undertaking to cooperate with their patients in litigation. See Battista v.

Bellino, 113 N.J.Super. 545 (App.Div.1971); Stanton v. Rushmore, 11 N.J.Misc. 544 (Sup.Ct.1933), aff'd. 112 N.J.L. 115, (E. & A.1933). Pursuant to this contractual relationship, a treating physician has a duty to render reasonably required litigation assistance to his patient. Spaulding v. Hussain, 229 N.J. Super. 430, 440 (App. Div. 1988).

In Spaulding, the plaintiff, seriously injured in a slip and fall accident, sued his treating physician after the physician "improperly refused to testify" for the plaintiff in his negligence action against a commercial property owner. The complaint alleged that, as the key witness, the physician's failure to appear forced the plaintiff to settle his negligence claim for a "grossly inadequate sum." Id. at 432. Therefore, the physician was obligated to make the plaintiff financially whole. Id. at 435. In defense, the physician asserted that the plaintiff was comparatively negligent for accepting the inadequate settlement offer instead of moving for a mistrial or seeking other alternative relief. Id. at 442-44.

The Appellate Division in Spaulding rejected the physician's argument, finding that the physician's nonappearance threatened a litigation catastrophe to plaintiff and his attorney. Id. at 444. Therefore, they "were obviously entitled to deal with the impending catastrophe in any reasonable manner," which included settling the case for a lesser amount and suing the physician for the difference. Ibid.

As such, the Court's holding in Spaulding reaffirmed the nature of the relationship between a patient and physician that treating doctors have a fiduciary duty to cooperate in litigation with their patients. A treating physician is not at liberty to ignore with impunity the basic obligation of rendering a reasonable modicum of litigation assistance. Nor is he free, without compelling professional justification, to renege on a promise, reasonably and detrimentally relied upon by his patient, to render specific litigation assistance. Id. at 441; see also Serrano v. Levitsky, 215 N.J. Super. 454 (Law. Div. 1986)(holding that it would be unfair to permit plaintiff's own physician to undermine plaintiff's case since the doctor's professional fealty must not be allowed to harm his patient to whom he owes the greater duty).

Moreover, the fiduciary duty of a treating physician to a patient includes the physician charging a reasonable fee for his or her services. R. 4:10-2(d)(2) states, "[u]nless otherwise ordered by the court, the party taking the deposition shall pay the expert or treating physician a reasonable fee for the appearance, to be determined by the court if the parties and the expert or treating physician cannot agree on the amount therefore." New Jersey Courts have ruled on what constitutes a reasonable expert fee. In Johnston v. Connaught Laboratories, Inc., 207 N.J.Super. 360 (L.Div.1985), plaintiff took the deposition of Dr. Pleasure, defendants' expert, a neurologist, and was billed $750 for the one hour deposition. Plaintiff offered Dr. Pleasure $200. At a case management conference, plaintiff raised the issue to the presiding Judge that the fee was excessive. The Trial Judge ruled that $200 was a fair and reasonable amount for the deposition. Id. at 362. See also Perez v. Papandrikos, 2006 WL 3720307 (N.J.Super. Law 2006)(court finds it equitable to set Dr. Fineman's deposition testimony rate at $650 per hour for a neurosurgeon that has been recognized as one of the Best Doctors in the New York Metropolitan area nine times.); Schroeder v. Boeing Commercial Airplane Co., a div. of Boeing Corp., 123 F.R.D. 166 (D.N.J.,1988)(finding that the Magistrate appropriately limited amount aircraft manufacturer could be charged for deposing former flight attendant's medical and economic experts, in view of number of experts claimed by attendant and excessive fees that they wished to charge).

In the present matter, it is clear that you have engaged in unlawful actions by failing to cooperate in the litigation which is your fiduciary obligation to the plaintiff Amarildo DeAssis. As shown in the Spaulding case, your failure to cooperate in this litigation will result in a future claim against you should this case be jeopardized. As such, you are under an obligation to cooperate and participate in all future treatment of Mr. DeAssis, including any deposition testimony, and a trial.

Accordingly, it is requested that you reconsider your position and permit Mr. DeAssis to have a lien placed on his case for the proceeds of your medical bills to come out of any future settlement in this matter in accordance with the conditions of our January 17, 2007 letter. Otherwise, I will have no other option but to file a lawsuit against you to compel same.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Very truly yours,
